

Dear Tom,

Thank you for your presentations on "Copyright for Community College Faculty and Administrators" on March 11, 2014. I've heard from a number of faculty members who were really impressed with the workshops, and they are deciding to implement the best practices they learned about with you. Of the 27 people who participated, at least four of them came up to me afterward to say what good presentation you offered. One even called it the "best copyright presentation I've ever attended."

Dr. Martha Lally, Psychology faculty, has decided to start working collaboratively with our librarians to implement copyright best practices in her department. In fact, she mentioned to me that she was able to apply some of the knowledge gained from your workshop that very week.

The Dean of Adult Education, Raiana Mearns, plans to share your one-page quick-guide handout with all of the faculty members in her program. Thank you for providing us with a Creative-Commons-licensed document that we can use immediately on our campus.

Our librarians especially appreciated that you researched our existing services and gave them a "shout out" as on-campus resources whom faculty can turn to when they want to continue the copyright conversation. Uri Toch said that you "rocked the house on Tuesday. Thanks for all the kind remarks about librarians. It is always nice to get a bump from a guest expert."

It's been a pleasure to work with you, and I am very satisfied with the whole process, from communicating with you beforehand to set things up to the follow-up conversations after the workshop. You've been very proactive in making sure everything ran smoothly and that you were able to tailor your presentation to our specific needs. I look forward to hopefully collaborating with you again someday.
